PUBLICATIONS:

Book Project

- Legal Mobilization and International Justice. This National Science Foundation funded project constructs an original database including over 18,000 judicial decisions across fifty years from the European Court of Human Rights. It is the first dataset to systematically detail interest and advocacy group litigation before an international court and the effects on domestic and international law. Methodologically the project relies on cross-national time series legal data, collected through case law analysis, elite interviews and archival documents. The book includes in depth case studies in the area of criminal justice, health rights and corporate litigation.
